Travelogue wanted to recreate the atmosphere of Monday afternoon in the last week of June when the workers abandon the hectic routine and the parks and beach become full of people in need of a pick-me-up. During these four days there is a heightened awareness of the summer ahead and the fact that the beautiful weather of the past few weeks is gone, but the weather and the beach still beckon. The game is about finding a deep sense of satisfaction in the simple moments of a weekend of surfing, beach parties, music, and hanging out with friends. This soundtrack reflects the sounds of the game. The music has a natural flow that is not interrupted by edits. Many of the songs are edited in and out with nothing more than a stereo fade. The songs are categorized into the following groups: Morning In The City: intro, mellow warm up; these songs are all supposed to sound a bit like the theme song from one of John Hughes' old-school movies. Air: new wave, mellow and nostalgic; these are some of the first songs to take you on your first journey into The City. The City: synth-heavy ballads; these are some of the most prominent songs of the game. Into The Sea: chill and woody; these songs also carry with them a sense of anticipation. They are a follow-up to the intro and build on the atmosphere a bit. Return To The Beach: breakup and radio-ready; these are the songs you want to listen to when you're on the beach or just walking the streets. Cool in the sense of being windy and romantic. Fly Away: party rock; these are the songs you want to dance to in the party/pub scenes. Inside The Fortress: bouncy synth-pop; these are the songs that make you want to go to the nightclub, dance in the street, and get smashed. Very excited and edgy. Wind: synth-pop with a hint of new wave; these are the upbeat songs you want to play in the club or in your car on the way to work. These are the tracks for dancing and singing along, sometimes to. High On The Beach: chill and laidback; these are the ones to go to when you're just chilling on the beach. Sunrise: wake-up songs for the morning and morning reflections; these are the songs that draw you towards

in A Bottle of Tar Honey The story of Mr.Bottle and his dream in A Bottle of Tar Honey; a Lyerly Song Spread. by Emily Hernandez,9th grade, Parrish Middle School. This story is about the taste of Texas: the rich, hot, sour, salty and sweet taste of Texas. In October, Mr.Bottle once again takes flight. This time to explore Texas. "To explore Texas?" Peter asked. Mr.Bottle nodded and smiled. "Yes. A toad said, 'As you wish.' And I said, 'Give me a bottle of Tar Honey, and off I will go,' And it shall be so." Peter blinked. "Exploring Texas? It is a dangerous place. "It will be very exciting, my boy!" Mr.Bottle replied. "We will go east. And more," Mr.Bottle said, gripping his hands together. "You told me that Tar Honey was only used for sour-sweet wines," Peter said. "If you are going to explore, shouldn't you bring a map? "Yes, and we will," Mr.Bottle replied. So, Mr.Bottle and Peter have a map. And the first stop is Fort Worth, the one and only city in Texas. "People of the City of Fort Worth: Be Warned! Vultures fly here," Mr.Bottle said. "Why?" Peter asked. "They feed on the dead," Mr.Bottle replied. "Poisonous toad," Peter mumbled, not really understanding what Mr.Bottle was saying. "Intolerable idea," Mr.Bottle protested. Peter sighed and looked at Mr.Bottle. "What else have you learned today?" Peter asked. Mr.Bottle smiled. "Oh, that most interesting of cities, Austin," Mr.Bottle said. "Where zebras roam. Where the many cats, of past generations, meet." "But I don't understand," Peter said. "Where do zebras roam? And cats

Game concept: Experience death. Game genre: Survival Horror About the concept of the game: Experience death is a survival horror game with a strong gothic influence. Immerse yourself in the eerie atmosphere of a grimy city, with a lot of arcane elements added to the mix. Though with a twist; if you play your cards right you might be able to pull out a win. No matter what, each new game starts will be a new adventure and a new chance to survive. About the developer: Mishance is an one-man made survival horror game. Starting life as a long term project for me, I eventually managed to release it as an alpha. I'd be very pleased to have your feedback. Gameplay: The player takes the role of a desperate guy in modern day society. He wakes up one day and soon finds himself surrounded by a strange glooms, and suspects that it is caused by a mysterious relic that caught his eye during his recent trip to the city. Stuck in a perpetual loop of paranoia and death, the player looks around to find out what's going on in the city, what's causing the strange glooms, and most importantly; where are his friends? Every little action the player takes has a result, either by chance or by player will. What this adds in to the game is a non-linear progression of the game, with the player being able to choose how he wants to progress. By manipulating things in the game, the player can make decisions that change the scenario of the game (like setting a certain store, and being told you can rest for a few days). On the other hand the player can make decisions that have a big impact later on in the game, like telling the story that she was sent to investigate the strange glooms, or interacting with a stranger by telling her that she was sent to investigate the strange glooms. "There was a girl, Séren, whose name I didn't know. Séren was sent here by her friends to find out what was going on in the city. She told me that she's going to stay with me for a couple of days." A: Bioshock (sequel of Bioshock Infinite) A: The first game I'd say. Not that it's necessarily a good game or anything, but it starts with a rather simple premise, and (spoilers) just gets we
