The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of chrysanthemum plant, botanically known as Chrysanthemum x morifolium Ramat., and hereinafter referred to by the cultivar name 'Zanmufari'. 'Zanmufari' is a product of a breeding and selection program for outdoor pot mums (Dendranthema grandiflora 'Summer Sparkle') which had the objective of creating new cultivars with a double, pink, decorative flower, a natural season flowering date around September 13-15 (week 37) and a blooming habit appropriate for 6-8 weeks response time. 'Zanmufari' is a seedling selection from a cross between the female parent id 2364 and the male parent id 2363. Plants of 'Zanmufari' differ from plants of the female parent in having a larger double pink and orange flower and a natural season flowering response time of approximately 6-8 weeks. Plants of the seedling differ from plants of the female parent in having a more spreading habit and a smaller, more double flower with more intense orange coloration. 'Zanmufari' was selected as one flowering plant within the progeny of the stated cross in 2001 in a controlled environment (greenhouse) in Haarlem, The Netherlands. The first act of asexual reproduction of 'Zanmufari' was accomplished when vegetative cuttings were taken from the initial selection in March 2001 in a controlled environment in Haarlem, The Netherlands. The present invention relates to an automated sample changer, and more particularly to a sample changer for biological fluid media such as blood samples. These sample changers use capillary tubes to transport the sample from the sample changer to a separate chamber where further analysis is performed. The sample changer typically comprises a capillary tube rack or chamber into which a plurality of capillary tubes are disposed. The tubes can be manually loaded into the tube rack in the known tube loading devices. When the tubes are removed from the rack, they are separated by an operator and placed into the different analysis chambers. In some sample changers, the tubes are
