Automate My PC records your mouse and keyboard with a powerful image recognition. Then using an innovative way of storing data, you can record these actions into a program that you can run, and then play back the actions. Automate My PC has options to let you make your own custom function buttons for record, play, pause, stop, and play back your actions. And if that's not enough, you can also add recorded actions to the action bar, that will show you all of the actions you have recorded. You can also modify your own actions by the variables you have recorded for them. You have options to choose your own text to appear on the toolbar, as well as the background for your form. When you are recording new actions, you can define how your actions should appear on the screen. The options include text fields, check boxes, buttons, and hyperlinks. The default values are reasonable, but you can change them to whatever suits you. It's a matter of personal preference. You can also configure the default values of what you want to record for each new action. Once it's configured, it will only show those options you choose, and not any others. You can change what the text is on the buttons to whatever you want as well. Once your buttons are recorded, you can play them back with its built-in play back. Every variable you have recorded and that's an option, will show. You can also show parameters or text you have recorded under the play back options. Automate My PC is also a multilingual program, so you can record actions in your own language. This lets you play back your actions in the language of your choice. You don't need to speak English to use Automate My PC. There are also advanced options for you to configure. So if you are advanced in your mouse and keyboard skills, you can configure your actions. You have options to change the recorded text in the buttons, change the order of the button, or change any text as well.
