Tuesday, March 9, 2011 First Chords! I wrote the chords up on the guitar as the fastest way to learn what you are working on, rather than having to read all over the place! So these are the ones I am playing. The first 4 are easy, then the first three chords from the first verse. Alright, so I know you have those popular chord charts of the songs out there, as well as the C-D-E-Gmaj, C-D-E/A-Gmaj, D-Em-G-C and E/C-D-G-C. I was a little thrown off by this, as I learned a lot of theory using those. If I want to break a song down into first chord patterns, what should I look for? (Please correct me if I'm wrong) I know that the first chord is always an Ab major, so that's in the E major scale, and then there's C-D-Emaj7 and G major, so we get that in the C, D and Emaj7, and then we just need to know the chord progression. So, if the first chord was in the Gmaj scale, would that be Am? Also, if my first chord is in the E major scale, but I'm trying to work on a song in the Dmaj, then I would use the C major scale, and then move to the Emaj7 chord, correct? I know I'm making it more difficult for myself by working at this alone, and really I only just want to learn the first 4 chords. That will be the basis of what I play, then I can slowly learn what you are actually trying
