A warrior who is the only survivor of an attack by an attacking monster, and a girl who was. Creator and Lawyer of the Japanese Law Office: Keishin Ryosuke. Nonequilibrium patterns in a shear granular system. A two-dimensional granular system confined in a narrow rectangular channel is studied using a computer simulation. Different fluidized granular layers are obtained depending on the nature of the walls. The wall has two effects on the fluidized layer: a force from the wall and a bottom friction that destabilizes the granular layer, if the bottom is slipping. We also find that the mean velocity profile can be characterized by a simple relation,  $v(y) = Vx(\gamma y)^{-\alpha}$  [ $F(\alpha) = F(\gamma - 1)$ ], where the constant values of  $F(\gamma)$  and  $\alpha$  depend on the wall properties. Q: How to: define variables in Python using exceptions and comparing them? In my script, I need to read the value of a variable in the form "[variable\_name]...", and if the variable does not exist or its value is different from the previous one, the script should raise an Exception. I'm using this solution so far: `#!/usr/bin/env python # -- coding: utf-8 -- import sys import re try: x = sys.argv[1] y = eval("x") except IndexError: print "Error" except ValueError: print "Error" except... But for the variables x and y, I know there is a better way to do this. A: y=sys.argv[1] if len(sys.argv)>2 else None is one possible solution. An alternative: import sys y = sys.argv[1] if len(sys.argv) > 2 else None You can even do it in one line: y = sys.argv[1] if len(sys.argv) > 2 else None Halle Berry was on a rampage on Wednesday as she delivered some very impassioned remarks at the International Telecommunication Union Conference (IUC) in Mexico City. The actress, 45, blasted the lack of gender equality and violence against women`
